

Handprint Green-fest

Annual fests are an integral part of college life which helps bring together students from various departments and courses. These fests being academically and socially important also draw a huge number of students as participants each year – both from the institute and outside – and this brings with it a lot of challenges in terms of environmental sustainability. To overcome these challenges and to ensure sustainability during and after the annual fests, a set of guidelines, roles and responsibilities have been developed by the South Asia Youth Environment Network (SAYEN) and Centre for Environment Education (CEE). These guidelines are being used to plan the fests sustainably which ultimately result in the reduction of carbon footprint and the overall environmental impact.
